Langhorne Creek records end of one of its earliest vintages...

GRAPE NEWS

By Tara Nash

The Langhorne Creek wine region is finishing up its earliest vintage season in recent memory due to the unseasonably dry conditions.

Langhorne Creek Grape and Wine Incorporated Executive Officer Lian Jaensch expected most local wineries to be finished by the end of this week.

Typically, the busy harvest and fermenting period runs through to the end of April or into May.

"Everyone's really happy with the quality and we're really looking forward to seeing the wines that come out," she said.

"Most people are getting Easter off which is pretty amazing.

"Every winemaker I've spoken to has been really happy with the fruit."

Falling for moo-vellous Langhorne Creek

By Tara Nash

Sunrise shined a national spotlight on the Langhorne Creek region when broadcasting from Bremerton Wines during the AFL Gather Round last week.

Presenter Katie Brown and the station's Cash Cow both skydived 9000ft live on TV, giving viewers around the country a bird's eye view of the area and a hilarious look at the freefall.

"I got a bit nervous but it was fun... I would do it again," Ms Brown told The Argus.

"We wanted to show off the region ahead of Gather Round and this is a perfect region to show off – it's beautiful.

"Looking at where the Murray ends and goes out to the ocean – it was so pretty."

After the live broadcast, about 50 people enjoyed breakfast prepared by Langhorne Creek Football Club and coffee by Langhorne Creek General Store.

Trees donated to Macclesfield RSL gardens

Six trees removed to make way for the new Mount Barker Hospital have been donated to the Macclesfield RSL Sub-Branch.

As part of a partnership between the Department of Health and Wellbeing, Barossa Hills Fleurieu Local Health Network (BHFLHN), Mount Barker District Council and the local RSL, BHFLHN has donated six trees, which were removed from footpaths on Wellington Road near Mount Barker District Soldiers Memorial Hospital, to the Macclesfield RSL.

On hearing about their future, the RSL Sub-Branch contacted both BHFLHN and council, where an agreement was reached to provide them with the mulch and any leftover wood.

Sections of the trees were mulched and have been used in the RSL's Anzac Gardens, while the remaining wood was chopped up by the Macclesfield Football Club, with some sold to raise funds for the RSL and other pieces to be donated to local residents.

"Once we heard these trees needed to be removed, our members believed we could be part of the solution for the remains," Macclesfield RSL Sub-Branch President, Dennis Oldenhove, said.

"This donation will benefit us and the community in a number of ways, and I thank both BHFLHN and council for helping us turn our idea into reality.

"Our garden volunteers are thrilled with the donation and they can't wait to use the mulch.

"We're also looking forward to helping locals keep warm during the winter months.

"We hope to give the community solace that the trees are back on consecrated land and helping us honour those who served our country."

Work will soon begin on another round of tree removal as part of the redevelopment.

Nine trees will be removed from an area next to the Summit Medical Centre, finishing today, with another nine to be taken down after the Easter break.

Traffic restrictions will be in place on Wellington Road around the hospital during these works, with the majority of the disruption scheduled for between 10am and 2pm.

These trees will also be mulched for use in the community, with BHFLHN to donate a portion of the latest round of mulch to the Macclesfield RSL and Duck Flat Community Garden.

Mental health centre opens

Locals over the age of 16 can now access free, walk-in mental health services after the recent opening of a Mount Barker centre.

The Mount Barker Medicare Mental Health Centre offers confidential support and information with no waiting lists or referrals.

The local facility is among more than 60 expected to be opened across the country by mid-2026, including five in South Australia.

Mount Barker's is jointly funded by Federal and State Governments through Country SA Primary Health Network and is operated by Summit Health.

The team includes qualified mental health clinicians, peer workers with lived experience, specialist alcohol and drug workers, and nursing staff.

Minister for Health and Wellbeing Chris Picton officially opened the centre last week, believing it is "going to save lives", while Member for Mayo Rebekha Sharkie congratulated everyone involved, wishing the service will stay for "many decades to come".

Local council staff receive National Emergency Medals for recovery efforts

By Giorgina McKay

Past and present Alexandrina and Mount Barker District Council members who played a crucial role in responding to the devastating Cudlee Creek, Duck Ponds and Kangaroo Island bushfires have been rewarded for their efforts with prestigious National Emergency Medals.

The three fires collectively burned nearly 235,000 hectares of land, destroyed more than 140 homes and hundreds more buildings, and tragically claimed three lives, along with devastating local wildlife populations.

Local Government played a key role in supporting emergency response efforts during these crises, with more than 220 council employees from across 39 councils contributing nearly 6400 staff hours.

The medals were awarded by the Governor-General at a special presentation held at LGA's Local Government House in Adelaide on Friday, April 4, which was also attended by Local Government Minister Joe Szakacs.

Among the recipients were former Alexandrina Council staff members Bradley Powell, Colin Moffatt and Colin Mudge.

Alexandrina Council's Senior Procurement Officer Nicholla Putland, who was working with the Kangaroo Island Council at the time, was also awarded.

Alexandrina Council Chief Executive Officer Andrew MacDonald was proud to have one current and three former employees receive prestigious National Emergency Medals.

"It was before my time at Alexandrina, but I am advised that council provided a grader, a loader and a utility for the clean-up and recovery phase," he said.

"Our employees worked closely with the CFS and spent five days on the Island, cleaning up roadways, removing fallen trees and other debris, and assessing the condition of burnt and still smouldering vegetation.

"It was pleasing for me to reflect on the Local Government employees who did receive National Emergency Medals.

"This type of council collaboration and support is a wonderful example of how the Local Government sector works together to support our communities."

Bill Shearer, Brett Watson, Damien Richardson, Daniel Newson, Darren Flaherty, Jason Hesse, Jason Simounds, Karl Manarangi, Kym Heinrich, Morris Chambers, Scott Thompson and Shaun Atkins from Mount Barker District Council also received medals.

Council contributed plant, equipment, materials, and staff time to assist in controlling the devastating fires, and additional resources were deployed following the fires to help restore essential services such as roads to a safe and functional standard.

Mount Barker District Council Mayor David Leach was "extremely grateful" to these staff members' commitment to the safety and recovery of others.

"Staff represented the Mount Barker District Council and provided vital support to the CFS – the lead agency in responding to and recovering from the Cudlee Creek fire," he said.

"Working in co-ordination with the Local Government Functional Support Group (LGFSG), they demonstrated exceptional dedication and an unwavering commitment to placing the needs of the community first throughout the emergency.

"The National Emergency Medal is a prestigious award for civilians and Emergency Service Organisation personnel and reflects the dedication of the recipients.

"Council and the entire Mount Barker community are immensely proud of these people within our staff and we extend our deepest thanks to each one of them.

"The work they undertook was dangerous, demanding, and carried out under extreme conditions."

SA Country Fire Service Chief Officer Brett Loughlin also praised councils' efforts.

"What I take most pride in is for everything we lost, we saved far more – we saved more lives than were lost, we prevented more injuries than occurred, and we saved more homes than were destroyed," he said.

"When the focus shifted in the immediate aftermath from response to recovery, Local Government was there playing an amazing role in restoring normality and getting people back to living their lives.

"Everyone receiving a National Emergency Medal should wear them with honour, because they have earned them – their contributions made a difference at a time when most people could only watch in horror as these events unfolded."

New drought grants for farmers and businesses

Grants of up to $1500 are now available to drought affected farming families and rural small business owners through the State Government's Rural Support Grant.

Delivered through Rural Business Support (RBS) from the Drought Support Package, this assistance offers relief to help cover essentials such as council rate, power bills, vehicle repairs and school costs.

The $55 million Drought Support Package, which is in addition to the $18 million in initial assistance announced in November 2024, brings State Government's total drought relief investment to $73 million.

The grant is delivered via the RBS Relief Fund, the charity arm of RBS, and is designed to help families who are working with the Rural Financial Counselling Service, which helps to meet people where they are, providing practical relief so they can focus on finding a way forward.

The $1500 grants will assist to help cover essential costs such as council rates, utility bills, medical appointments and prescriptions and vehicle repairs.

Farming families and rural small and family business owners can contact Rural Business Support on 1800 836 211 or visit (www.ruralbusinesssupport.org.au).

Cruel is the Light

RATING

If I'm a sucker for anything, it's a good enemies-to-lovers plot.

While Cruel is the Light is more falling for someone who SHOULD be my enemy rather than being considered the enemy from the outright, it's the next best thing.

And combined with fantasy worldbuilding? This book had me hook, line and sinker.

Written by Sophie Clark, Cruel is the Light is set during a brutal war between demons and humanity which has raged across Europe, specifically Rome or 'The Vatican' to narrow it down, for more than a century.

At its centre are two elite soldiers – powerful exorcist trained and graduated at the top of her class at the prestigious Vatican Academy Selene Alleva, who is haunted by a dark past, and foot soldier Jules Lacroix, who is an orphan trying to figure out who he is and where he comes from.

When the pair cross paths, despite the trust and unwelcome attraction, they must join forces to get to the bottom of a series of strange demon attacks.

It leads them to a terrible secret at the heart of the holy Vatican City they both must unravel and another that forces Selene to make the impossible choice between love and duty.

The first hundred pages of the book are a hard sell.

It's hard to wrap your head around the hierarchy of exorcists and demons, and how the former's magic works in the beginning, and the little inserts of Italian and French throughout the book, despite some translation, can withdraw the reader slightly out of the world in order to understand exactly what it is they are reading.

This was the reason I had to deduct one star from the rating, but once you get over that hurdle, the book lived up to all my romantasy (romance x fantasy) needs:

Does it involve some kind of fantasy element? Check.

Do the characters have insane chemistry? Check.

Is the banter between said characters off the charts? Check, check and check.

For those dipping their toes into the genre, Cruel is the Light is a good place to start and definitely one of the few you can read around your religious family.

Progress for St Andrew's Church restoration

By Deirdre Graham

A $20,000 bequest has enabled professional cleaners to clear out 14 bags of rubbish from the St Andrew's Church's tower, ticking off the latest bit of progress in the fight to restore the building.

As previously reported in The Southern Argus, the Uniting Church congregation has been working to restore the town's beloved church.

Most recently, bird waste and other debris was removed from the tower, and the bell underwent a clean.

"SA Window Cleaning have been here to do preventative maintenance in the top three levels of the tower, from the roof hatch down to the clock level," St Andrew's Restoration Committee spokesperson, Peter Roberts, said.

"There are 14 bags of residual bird waste and other debris that has accumulated because of the prolonged access by numerous bird life over recent years, coming in through the louvre vents on the top of the tower, and... they cleaned the guttering around the roof hatch because it was blocked solid with debris.

"They have absolutely spotlessly cleaned the top three levels and cleaned the timber work that the bell is supported from.

"They have (also) absolutely cleaned the bell to new condition, where the inscription can be read cleanly, from 1867.

"This is preventative maintenance until such time as we can complete the full restoration of the tower, inside and out."

The church's bell weighs a ton in imperial measurements and was cast in Sheffield in England before being shipped out to Australia.

Mr Roberts said "a lot of effort and ingenuity" would have gone into installing it in the tower.

He added the supporting wood was in "pristine" condition and the bell's U-bolts also in a good state.

"We had a local bequest for the work to be done on the tower, and that is how we were able to do this at this time," Mr Roberts said.

"It is up to us as the current custodians of the building to honour the settlers' initiative and determination to build this building, which was only described (recently) by one of the school teachers as the 'Strathalbyn cathedral'."

What part of the multi-million-dollar project to be done next was under debate.

"It is based entirely on the extent of funding that we can marshal together," Mr Roberts said.

"We hope we can do some major work on the roof and gutters of the church, but again it is preventative maintenance to rectify this present condition before it gets any worse.

"After this drought weather we have had, cracks are opening up, and of course once they open they don't close, and when it does turn wet again, we don't want any moisture getting into those cracks and causing internal damage.

"The first immediate turn is to redo the vestry, with cracking there, and replace the ceiling.

"That hopefully will be done within the next six months, subject to workers being available, and we have set an amount aside for that."

Birds such as pigeons and little corellas continued to be a constant source of exasperation for the project.

"We have a regular cleaner that comes every two to three months to clean the gutters and down pipes, and check any cracked roof tiles," Mr Roberts said.

"That is costing us a minimum of $1000 a year to keep on top of the continuing deterioration caused by bird damage.

"That is incessant and if you magnify that across the whole town, with all the buildings that are affected... it is a monumental cost to the community."

Donations towards the restoration can be made at any time.

"We are very fortunate as a rural community in a regional area to have a building of this magnitude," Mr Roberts said.

"It deserves the repair and respect as any other property in the state."

Visitors are encouraged to wander over to Milang Lakeside Butter Factory, and view 12 arts and crafts stalls, have a tasting at Kanoetree Wines or a meal. The neighbouring fundraising shop Already Read Books will also be open. Milang and District Community Association (MADCA) President Karyn Bradford described the event as "team effort". "The Railway and MADCA both think that (the event) is a really great thing for this community to have - there's a bit of buzz around town and something for visitors to see and do," she said. "It's always quite upbeat... it's school holidays, so we get lots of families and people out enjoying what we hope will be delightful weather. "It's a really nice holiday atmosphere – everyone is friendly and it's relaxing." Visitors can expect a range of items from local makers, typically from the Goolwa, Strathalbyn, Mt Barker and Adelaide region. Blaze erupts at Meadows crash repairers

A structure fire that erupted in the early hours of last Thursday morning has caused in excess of half a million dollars in damage to a Meadows business.

Shortly after 1.20am on April 10, approximately 40 Country Fire Service (CFS) firefighters with 10 trucks, worked alongside the Metropolitan Fire Service, with support from SA Ambulance Service, in a co-ordinated effort to extinguish a fire at Meadows Panelworx Crash Repairs on Mawson Road.

Volunteer firefighters wearing breathing apparatus prevented the fire from spreading, which could have caused much greater damage to the business and neighbouring properties.

The estimated damage is likely in excess of $500,000.

Fire investigators attended the site.

Meadows Panelworx Crash Repairs’ Rick Kirton thanked the community for its condolences, and offers of help and support.

“We have felt the full weight of a small community’s kindness and willingness to get in and help, and have so much love and gratitude for you all,” he wrote in a Facebook post.

“We will be back better than ever.

“We apologise for any inconvenience and are more than happy to assist in helping find the right team to get you back on the road while we are out of action.”

The fire is believed to have begun at the rear of the building.

Blaze breaks out at Bull Creek

A vehicle fire quickly escalataded when it spread into nearby scrub and grass at Bull Creek, south of Meadows, on Sunday.

At around 10.45am, Strathalbyn, Ashbourne, Meadows, Macclesfield, Blackfellows, Echunga and Kangarilla Country Fire Service (CFS) crews responded to reports of a car on fire on Bull Creek Road, which quickly spread into dry vegetation on the roadside.

Prevailing winds and the terrain pushed the fire in a south-easterly direction towards houses, but thankfully 42 air drops were able to halt the forward rate of spread.

By about 6pm the fire was controlled, with a few hotspots still active in the middle of the burnt area.

The caravan was saved but the car was written off.

A couple of appliances remained on scene overnight to prevent flare-ups.

One of the impacted residents Meegan McCulloch thanked the CFS, other first responders, neighbours and friends who helped control the blaze.

“(We are) thankful we did not lose our house or our animals,” she said.

The incident caused the local residents to lose some fencing and feed for livestock.

Anyone who is able to provide hay is asked to donate.

Suspicious fire at Mt Barker school

Police are investigating a suspicious fire that erupted at a Mount Barker school in the early hours of Tuesday morning.

Just after 4am, 30 firefighters from four Metropolitan Fire Service and three Country Fire Service appliances, and police were called to Mount Barker Waldorf School on Sims Road following reports a building was on fire.

On arrival, fires found a 10m x 20m building well-involved and producing thick smoke.

Firefighters in breathing apparatus used multiple hose lines to externally attack the blaze, which was made more difficult due to structural collapse.

The fire was contained in approximately 60 minutes and fully extinguished in a further hour.

Fire technicians attended the scene later that morning to determine the cause.

Anyone with information that may assist with the investigation is asked to contact Crime Stoppers on 1800 333 000 or online at (www.crimestoppers.com.au).

Multiple Country Fire Service (CFS) crews and aircraft prevented a grass fire from threatening residences near Strathalbyn last Thursday.

At about 11.50am on April 10, Strathalbyn, Meadows and Macclesfield CFS crews responded to a fire that broke out at a Hillview Road property.

Five trucks with 25 firefighters, supported by FFUs and seven aerial drops by five aircraft, managed to control the incident by 2.30pm.

No impact occurred to the community or residence.

Motorists urged to have a ‘sweet’ drive this Easter

A stronger police presence can be egg-spected out on the roads and on the water this long weekend to make sure motorists are ‘keeping it sweet’ during their travels over Easter.

In 2024, three lives were lost and 18 serious injuries incurred during the Easter long weekend on South Australian roads.

Operation Safe Holidays will be deployed state-wide from today to Monday, with a focus on the ‘Fatal Five’ factors that lead to road trauma, to ensure road users are ‘keeping it sweet’ on the roads by not taking risks.

Hills Fleurieu Local Service Area Superintendent Joanne Howard said people using local roads can expect a police presence ensuring safety in the region.

“This weekend, police will be targeting the ‘Fatal Five’ offences, with a focus on speeding and dangerous road use, including motorbikes hooning through the Hills,” Superintendent Howard said.

“If you’re travelling with family or friends this Easter, consider the distance you need to travel by planning your rest stops and drive to the conditions.

“Stick to the speed limits and remember on country roads the speed limit is 100km/h unless signed.”

Meanwhile, out on the water, police and marine safety officers will be ramping up patrols across inland and coastal locations over the back-to-back long weekends.

“We encourage the public to make the most of the warm weather and enjoy our waterways, but they must do so safely,” Senior Sergeant Darian Leske, from SAPOL’s Water Operations Unit, said.

“Police will be working with our partner agencies to ensure everyone is acting responsibly while on the water by detecting breaches of the Harbours and Navigation Act.

“We will be conducting safety equipment checks, and random alcohol and drug testing of boat operators, observers and skiers because, as on land, a blood alcohol limit of 0.05 applies.”

Failing to carry appropriate safety equipment, misuse of or not carrying lifejackets, outdated flares, unregistered vessels, and exceeding speed limits were the top five non-compliance issues among water users last Easter period.

Since January 1 this year, older standard lifejackets have no longer been acceptable to use and jackets must now meet the AS 4758 standard.

“It only takes a moment to put a lifejacket on, but not wearing one on the water when trouble strikes can cost your life in an instant,” Manager Marine Safety and Compliance at the Department for Infrastructure and Transport, Gordon Panton, said.

“More than one third of the vessels we checked last Easter on coastal waters and at boat ramps were non-compliant, with misuse of or not carrying lifejackets among the most common issues.

“Boaties and holidaymakers are reminded to check their lifejackets are to standard, fit well, and are in good working condition, that they are operating safely and keeping to speed limits around other water users, and they have the right safety equipment on board.”

Fisheries will also have an on-water and on-land presence across the state over the Easter and Anzac Day long weekends, and officers will be especially checking compliance with the no-take zones for snapper over the period.

“To combat the spread of the Abalone virus AVG, decontamination protocols apply to fishing devices and boats, especially those operating from the Murray Mouth to the Victorian Border,” PIRSA’s Acting General Manager Operations Support, Gary Darter, said.

“We ask that fishers adhere to size and bag limits and fishing gear regulations, and are encouraged to access the Rec Fishing App or the PIRSA website for further information.”

People are also reminded to:

- Let someone know where you’re going and when you’ll be back.
 - Slow your vessel to four knots when near other boats, ramps, jetties, swimmers, surfaces and the shore.
 - Keep keys in a safe location. Do not hide them in your car, caravan or boat.
 - Remove fishing rods, tackle boxes and eskies from boats and trailers when not in use.
 - Securely attach trailers and boats to a vehicle or a solid fixture when not in use.
 - Be aware of water safety issues at the beach or at the river, including rips and currents, maritime safety, and the dangers of marine life.
 - Never leave valuable items unattended or under a beach towel. Use a watertight container or leave items secured in your holiday home.
- Report any suspicious behaviour to SAPOL by calling 131 444.

Children’s brush with art world

By Tara Nash

Strathalbyn Kindergarten students will soon get their big break into the art world, as they make their gallery debut in a special exhibition at Stationmaster’s Art Gallery.

Colourful leaves, trees and the environment fitting an autumn theme will be hung on small canvases, as well as a display of woven pieces, by students from the Coronation Road and Burkett Drive campuses.

Art collectors will also have the option of acquiring some of the work, as students have the option of putting it up for sale.

“I’ve always wanted to encourage children to paint and to have fun,” Exhibition Convenor, Kathleen Cain, said.

“It’s a great opportunity for them to come in and see their work hanging up in a gallery.

“We try to do the same for high school students to encourage them as well.”

One room at the gallery will be dedicated to the work as part of the station’s winter exhibition.

The official opening is April 27 from 2pm.

Nuclear support
melting down

RE-Alliance has been working with rural and regional communities navigating energy projects for more than a decade.

We recently released polling across several proposed nuclear communities, which found support for nuclear reactors in those communities was very low.

The polling of 1250 regional residents was conducted by respected research firm 89 Degrees East, which is a member of the Research Society of Australia.

The data revealed only 22 per cent of people in Central West NSW support nuclear, 24 per cent in Central Queensland, 32 per cent in Hunter, 24 per cent in south west WA and just 31 per cent in Gippsland.

Interestingly, regional communities also don’t believe that nuclear power is capable of bringing down their energy bills anytime soon, while 72 per cent said renewables would bring bills down faster.

Further, a report released by former Land and Water Australia CEO Professor Andrew Campbell has found an extra 200 gegalitres of annual water allocation would need to be acquired from farmers and other water customers to cool the proposed nuclear reactors.

The report also found half the reactors couldn’t be built because there isn’t enough water to cool them, and another 40 per cent would have to be turned off regularly due to lack of water.

RE-Alliance will continue to push that all energy projects being proposed in regional and rural Australia contribute to the strength and resilience of our regions, and that clear information is readily accessible.

Fires and medals

With the fire season set to continue and fires still keeping our local Country Fire Service (CFS) volunteers busy, the chance of an out-of-control fire that threatens homes, properties, bushland, animals and people remains.

So far this fire season, the region has been spared the heartache of loss of life due to the diligence and hard work of our emergency services personnel and others.

Recently, past and present Alexandrina and Mount Barker District Council staff members who played a crucial role in responding to the devastating Cudlee Creek, Duck Ponds, and Kangaroo Island bushfires were recognised with National Emergency Medals.

The three fires collectively burned nearly 235,000 hectares of land, destroyed more than 140 homes and hundreds more buildings, and tragically claimed three lives, along with devastating local wildlife populations.

Local Government played a key role in supporting the emergency response efforts across all three fires, with more than 220 council employees from across 39 councils contributing nearly 6400 staff hours.

Former Alexandrina Council staff members Bradley Powell, Colin Moffatt and Colin Mudge received a medal, while the council’s Senior Procurement Officer Nicholla Putland, who was working with the Kangaroo Island Council at the time was also awarded.

At Mount Barker District Council, medals went to Bill Shearer, Brett Watson, Damien Richardson, Daniel Newson, Darren Flaherty, Jason Hess, Jason Simounds, Karl Manarangi, Kym Heinrich, Morris Chambers, Scott Thompson and Shaun Atkins.

In South Australia, CFS Chief Executive Officer Brett Loughlin’s words were for everything that was lost, far more was saved.

National Emergency Medals are awarded to people who rendered sustained or significant service during nationally-significant emergencies in Australia.

For our awardees, you should be proud, you have served us well.

Goolwa College seeks to partner with businesses

By Georgina McKay

A local high school is seeking to partner with community businesses on work experience opportunities for its students.

Goolwa Secondary College’s work experience program offers students in years 10 and 11 the opportunity to get hands-on experience in the workforce and gain the skills needed to become employable.

The program has seen great success with securing work experience for the students, but the school would like to expand the types of opportunities available by partnering with local businesses and employers on the following:

- School-based apprenticeships/traineeships: allows students from years 10 to 12 to earn a wage, gain a nationally recognised qualification, and work towards their SACE at the same time.
- Student mentorship initiative: provide guidance and practical experience to help students overcome challenges and succeed while also developing essential employability skills.
- Job trials: offer short-term opportunities for students to showcase their skills and learn about workplace expectations.
- Industry immersion opportunities: host a small group of students for one to two days to immerse them in that industry and workplace culture.
- Mock interviews: conduct simulated interviews to help students build confidence, improve their interview skills, and gain constructive feedback.

The main aim for Co-ordinator of Culture, Community and Pathways Sean Beath, who is leading the call, is to show students the job opportunities out there for them and make them feel confident enough to strive for them.

“My passion for the place is to give the students the feeling like there are jobs out there for them in the local community because I think a lot of them are a bit fearful that there’s not those opportunities and they don’t necessarily feel like they know how to seek (them),” he said.

“I want them to leave school feeling like ‘I either know what I want to study one day and potentially come back here and work’ or ‘there’s these job opportunities here and I know how to get those jobs or put myself in the best position to get those jobs.’

“I also want them all leaving here being employable.

“I would love for them to have those employability skills where our local community are like ‘those kids from Goolwa have got the skills we need and want’.

“I think the teachers here do a really good job of explaining what employability skills are and trying to teach it as well, but then getting out in the workforce and getting exposure is probably the best thing for it.”

The work experience program will take place on week nine of term two, from June 23 to 27.

Interested businesses are encouraged to get in contact with the school by either calling the pathways mobile on 0407 842 263 or emailing (dl.1915.info@schools.sa.edu.au).

In return, the school offers businesses and employers enthusiastic and motivated workers, and the opportunity to trial potential future employees, boost the business’ community profile, mentor and inspire young people and strengthen workplace culture, among other benefits.

This year marks 110 years since the landing at Gallipoli — a defining moment in our nation’s history.

On 25 April 1915, Australian and New Zealand troops landed on the Gallipoli peninsula as part of an Allied campaign to secure a sea route to Russia. Met with fierce resistance from the Ottoman defenders, what was meant to be a swift campaign became an eight-month ordeal. More than 8,000 Australian soldiers lost their lives in the harsh trenches and rugged terrain of Gallipoli.

These soldiers became known as the Anzacs — the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps — and the spirit they embodied has become part of our national identity: courage, mateship, endurance, and sacrifice.

Anzac Day now honours not just those who fought at Gallipoli, but every Australian who has worn our uniform, past and present. It is a time to pause, reflect and remember the sacrifices made.

Thank you to all our service men and women.

'Fetching' day for Pups in the Park

By Deirdre Graham

An inaugural event to help spread the word about Australian Lions Hearing Dogs has surpassed the expectations of organisers.

About 400 to 500 people – many with their own dogs – gathered at a Pop-Up Park in Mount Barker to learn more about the organisation that trains dogs for hearing impaired people, people with type one diabetes, and more recently, for returned service personnel with PTSD.

"The day was a kick starter to National Hearing Dog Day, which is on April 19, so it was to kind of start celebrations for that, and to expose the public to our organisation and tell them how to help," Community Engagement Co-ordinator, Jess Hattam, said.

"We had some merchandise there and we had our lovely trainee assistance dogs, and (we informed people about) how they can get involved if they want to apply for one of our dogs, donate to us, volunteer, and learn more about us."

Australian Lions Hearing Dogs has provided hearing assistance dogs for more than 40 years, but is now branching out to other support areas such as the Diabetic Alert Dog program and Psychiatric Assistant Dog program.

At the moment the organisation has 20 dogs in training across all three programs, with about 150 active assistant dogs across Australia.

"We rely pretty much on the generosity of the Australian public to get our dogs out completely free of charge," Miss Hattam said.

"If people head to the website, they can donate, become a monthly sponsor, sponsor a dog or help raise one of our assistant dog puppies.

"If they are local to Verdun, (where the organisation is based), they can get involved with our Bed and Breakfast program (and have a lovely assist dog in their house for a couple of months, and drop it off every day for school.

"Our lovely puppy team will guide you through the process, give you everything you need, including food, all vet bills covered, and grooming, and we will do fortnightly visits with you just to ensure the dog is being well-socialised and its training is coming along nicely."

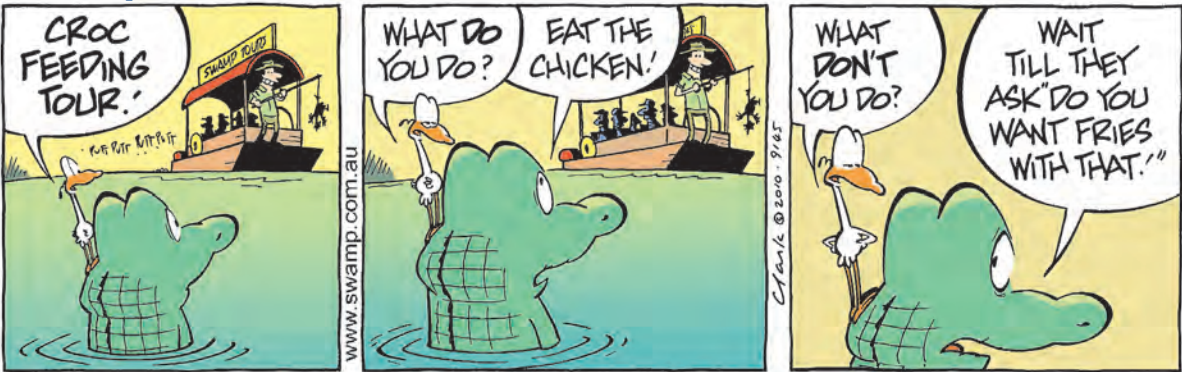

Miss Hattam thanked Mount Barker Pet Care Centre for sponsoring the event and Mount Barker District Council for its support.

Technology showcased at open day

By Georgina McKay

An innovative robotics milking farm formed by two families was officially opened at Mount Compass last Wednesday, showcasing the benefits of the new technology for local farmers.

The Whispering Pines dairy farm is a partnership between the Hicks and Jacobs families who came together to create an innovative dairy farming system using the latest robot milking technology from agricultural robotics manufacturers Lely.

The families installed eight of Lely's Astronaut A5 Milking Robots at the Mount Compass-based farm, which has allowed them to expand their herd to 500 cows, while also improving milk quality and reducing labour demands.

Whispering Pines Dairy co-partner Warren Jacobs was excited about the integration of robotic technology on his farm.

"At each stage of the process of moving to this new technology, I could see the benefits," he said.

"It's exciting technology, with many positive advantages for the farmer which flow onto the entire dairy industry in terms of efficiency and information.

"The life of a dairy farmer can be all-consuming with early starts and late finishes, making it difficult to juggle family commitments and holidays.

"The introduction of robotic technology has allowed dairy farmers to expand their herds and build their business, while giving them more flexibility for family and work-life balance."

The open day gave curious dairy farmers an opportunity to see cows being milked autonomously and to see a robotic dairy in action up-close.

Member for Finniss and former dairy farmer David Basham was on hand to cut the ribbon.

"It's a real privilege," he said.

"My family history in dairy was quite extensive until, after 182 years of dairy farming here in South Australia, we sold the farm about three years ago.

"I think the future of dairy farming is very much in the robotics and the advantages of it are enormous through labor changes as well as milk quality."

Ryan Turner, Jackson Nesbitt, Gordon Cubley and Jarrod Hartgen keep warm with coffees provided by a local vendor.

South Australian Wooden Boat Festival

26-27 April 2025 | Goolwa Wharf Precinct

Goolwa set for boatloads of fun

The South Australian Wooden Boat Festival (SAWBF) is just around the corner, and has a huge line-up of events and attractions planned for boaties, families and lovers of heritage, tradition and maritime.

Supported by the South Australian Tourism Commission, this biennial event on the weekend of April 26 and 27 will feature more than 100 wooden boats – new and vintage, under sail, steam, motor and paddle.

The 2025 SAWBF, which is also the 19th festival, will be officially opened by Her Excellency Frances Adamson AC, Governor of South Australia.

Thousands of festival goers are expected to enjoy sailing races, paddle steamer cruises, steam train trips, maritime exhibits at the wharf and the Armfield Slip, the Rough 'n' Ready boat building competition, vintage bi-plane aerial displays, live music, performances from the Royal Australian Navy Band, food, markets, and family-friendly entertainment with the Little Pirates Tent, the Little Picassos art exhibition and All A (card) board workshop.

An unmissable highlight of the festival will be a light display over the waters of the Goolwa channel on Saturday night when wooden boats adorned with twinkling fairy lights will line the waterfront at the Goolwa Wharf Precinct.

Then, as night falls, the sky will come alive with a spectacular fireworks display launched from the Hindmarsh Island Bridge.

The festival will also be the backdrop of a celebration on April 26 to officially open the upgrade of the historic Goolwa Wharf Precinct.

Federal and State Governments will join Alexandrina Council in unveiling a plaque recognising the work done on this major project to restore Goolwa Wharf, the Wharf Shed, the Signal Point Experience Centre and the surrounds of the heritage-listed precinct.

This project was led by council and made possible thanks to $3.75 million in funding from the Federal Government and an additional $1.25 million from the State Government.

The Federal Government also provided $980,000 through the Murray-Darling Basin Economic Development Program to create the permanent interactive exhibition 'Yuntulun Ku:li-war', the centrepiece of the upgraded Signal Point Experience Centre within the precinct.

"This year's SA Wooden Boat Festival brings together the nostalgia of our rich wooden boat history with a celebration of our major project to preserve and protect our heritage Goolwa Wharf Precinct," Mayor, Keith Parkes, said.

"Goolwa Wharf is a special place, one of only two places in the world where you can step off a steam train and board a paddle steamer.

"The festival opening will recognise this unique feature with the Steam Salute, a moment when the SteamRanger train and the Paddlesteamer PS Oscar W exchange whistles.

"I'm a boatie myself so this festival is special to me because it showcases the craftsmanship of traditional boatbuilding and the heritage of Goolwa which is integral to the early history of South Australia and is now a world-class destination with a wonderful mix of tourism and cultural attractions."

Previously sunken

By Tara Nash

A restored 1937 boat that was once sunken at the bottom of the river will be one of the pride-and-joys on display at the upcoming SA Wooden Boat Festival.

Curlew was originally built in Kingston by local fishermen who wanted something different to cutout boats that were carvel-built, which is made from planks joined smoothly and not overlapping.

Instead, Jack Lane and Len Goldfinch built theirs using the clinker method, where the external planks overlap and are secured with clinched nails.

It attracted plenty of onlookers at the time, and some criticism for a boat so different from anything in those waters before.

One of the challenges was the keel, which was made with West Australian jarrah.

The wood arrived by sea, but being more than 30ft, it was too big to unload onto the jetty trolley so had to be towed ashore by a dinghy.

Curlew became the first locally built boat, and the only clinker-built fishing boat on those waters, and went on to be used for cray and shark fishing.

When World War II came, shark oil was needed for burns treatment as part of the war effort, so Mr Goldfinch and others caught shark.

Curlew has now had nine owners over its 88 years, and more recently local Brett Hoppen – who owned it for about 20 years – and who brought it back to its former glory after it sunk to the bottom of the river at Mannum about 25 years ago.

The wide, 28-foot boat has now been owned by Hindmarsh Island’s Lee Spencer for the past five years.

While the deck is new, much of the boat is still original including the hull.

Mr Spencer believes part of the fun is the ongoing maintenance, after working with boats for about 27 years.

“You’re forever doing something to them,” he said.

“It keeps you busy.”

He is now working to polishing it up to scratch to show visitors of the upcoming SA Wooden Boat Festival, which he expects will be a “good weekend”.

“The atmosphere is good – all the putt putts cruising around are good to see,” Mr Spencer said.

“It’s good to see people are restoring and looking after them – no one is building new (wooden boats) anymore, so you’ve got to maintain them.”

Descendants of Curlew’s boat builder had a full circle moment when visiting the previous SA Wooden Boat Festival.

They connected with Mr Spencer, viewed the boat and went for a cruise.

NDIS in action at chicken farm

By Deirdre Graham

About four years ago, Heather Pearce bought an 80-acre allotment at Finniss, with no real plans for it except maybe to retire there.

Then the egg shortage hit and an idea was hatched between the OT worker and her farmer brother Alistair – run a chicken farm and employ people under the NDIS scheme.

“Heather had friends who were doing pasture chickens down in the South East, and when we started having egg shortages, it just seemed like a good fit for here,” Mr Pearce said.

“Then, through her work with her medical practice, she had seen the NDIS model helping people getting work through it and thought that would be a good fit for here as well.”

Currently, Rise and Shine Eggs employs four people with a disability and four support workers who look after about 2400 chickens and the eggs they lay.

“The work is very suitable for people who like repetition and that don’t handle new things very well,” Mr Pearce said.

“All the people who work here have really positive experiences out of it.

“They check the fence, check the feed and water, then they will collect the eggs, and as they collect them, they grade them into clean and dirty.

Rise and Shine Eggs worker Stephen Verco says the job on the chicken farm has been life changing. INSET: The eggs are rolled off via a conveyor belt. Photos: Deirdre Graham

“At the moment we deliver to Finniss General Store and Sazon Espresso in Mount Barker, and the rest go to Rohde’s and are marketed under their label.”

The chickens are left to roam the paddock during the day, making themselves sandbaths to cool off in, and spend the night in caravans before laying their eggs in the morning.

“The caravans are all fully automated,” Mr Pearce said.

“The chooks all get in there at night, the doors shut automatically, and there is a nesting box down the middle that means they can’t roost when they are laying eggs.

“In the morning they open automatically and pretty much they look after themselves – we just have to fill up the feeders when they get low.

“They do get wormed when they need it through the feed and, as yet, we haven’t had any health issues that we have had to medicate for.

“On the whole they are pretty happy being out in the open and running around.”

Mr Pearce said being able to employ people under the NDIS scheme and pay them award wages was a win-win situation.

“You don’t have to look hard to find some negative stories about NDIS,” he said.

“But this is doing what it is meant to – it is giving people a meaningful job.

“We wouldn’t be able to get by without them. “They like the work, and we do what we can to help them.

“It is nice seeing that pride in people, when they are happy being here.”

Worker Stephen Verco, who lives with an intellectual disability, has worked at the farm for about eight months as a process worker.

He says it has changed his life.

“I love it,” Mr Verco said.

“I do a few other farm chores around the place, do a bit of whipper-snipping and gardening, make sure the feeders are all full, the water tank has water in it and the dogs get fed, and it gives me a few different jobs that I quite enjoy.”

He said finding work when you have a disability is difficult.

“It was really hard to be honest, just through me not being a computer or phone savvy person,” Mr Verco said.

“My support workers and carers helped me find this place and I have loved it ever since.

“It has made a heap of a difference.

“I am not as depressed as I was, I get to drive out here from Mount Barker, and I just like being in the open spaces, doing what I do here, so it is really good.”

Helping the workers is a team of four Maremma dogs that protect the chickens from foxes and wedgetail eagles.

Mr Pearce hopes to expand the farm in the future and continue to provide more opportunities for disabled workers.

“We can’t have more chooks here, so we are looking at either buying another place or we have been talking to a guy in Langhorne Creek (who) is keen to try running some there,” he said.

“He will buy the caravan, we will supply the chooks and the feed, we just have to work out the business model that suits everyone.”

Wrapping up an early vintage

By Tara Nash

The Langhorne Creek wine region is finishing up its earliest vintage season in recent memory due to the unseasonably dry conditions.

Langhorne Creek Grape and Wine Incorporated Executive Officer Lian Jaensch expected most local wineries to be finished by the end of this week.

Typically, the busy harvest and fermenting period runs through to the end of April or into May.

"Everyone's really happy with the quality and we're really looking forward to seeing the wines that come out," she said.

"Most people are getting Easter off which is pretty amazing.

"Every winemaker I've spoken to has been really happy with the fruit."

Some wineries finished vintage weeks ago, while others are processing their late varieties of grapes, depending on the winemaker, grape variety, and goals.

One of the wineries finishing up is Kimbolton, with its final variety being the Italian red wine montepulciano.

Viticulturalist Jenny Venus – who has been in the industry for 20 years – hasn't seen a vintage this early in a long time.

Kimbolton's season is running about three to four weeks earlier than last year's schedule.

"I think it will be a really great vintage – what fruit has been picked has been really good quality, it's ripe and well," she said.

"It's been good weather... for a grape grower, dry weather isn't a bad thing – there's less disease and it ripens nicely.

"It's really been an ideal vintage as a grower and the quality is lovely."

Much like other wineries in the region, Kimbolton relied on irrigation more this year due to the dry conditions.

While the region is celebrating a successful season in terms of the high-quality fruit, Ms Jaensch said the industry is still facing a "pretty tough" trading environment.

"It's been a really good vintage as far as fruit quantity and quality, but the sales of fruit are still being impacted heavily by the supply/demand imbalance," she said.

"We've got a lot of cabernet and shiraz in this region, and there will be a lot of fruit that isn't sold."

Ms Jaensch credited the challenges to a combination of factors: the disruption from the closure of the Chinese market, a shift in consumer sentiment, changes since COVID, and a worldwide shift in markets.

Australia has an oversupply of red grapes, and the Langhorne Creek region provides much fruit to the national market.

Ms Jaensch stressed the importance of shopping locally especially due to the high-standards of the local region, which will be highlighted in the upcoming Langhorne Creek Wine Show.

Every year, the region's wines are judged according to international standards, with the winners for each category announced on May 9.

COMMEMORATING ANZAC

ALL EYES ON THE CUP: Hawks and Roosters battle for Anzac Day glory

By Giordina McKay

Strathalbyn and Langhorne Creek's rivalry will be "alive and well" next Friday night when the two football clubs face off for the Daish Irrigation Challenge Cup during the annual Anzac Day clash.

The match-up takes place at Strathalbyn this year, where large crowds are expected to gather to watch the Junior Colts, Senior Colts, Reserves and A Grade Men play for the pride of playing on Anzac Day along with bragging rights.

It will also be the first win for the season for whoever comes out victorious in the A Grade.

It's the first Anzac Day cup clash for Strathalbyn A Grade Men Coach Wayne Knowles and one he is both excited and nervous for.

"I really cherish Anzac Day - I think it's the most important day on the Australian calendar," he said.

"The boys are jumping out of their skin to play.

"We've got some FIFO guys who are actually taking time off work to make sure they're here for it.

"It's a big deal for us, and from all reports both clubs have lost players, so it's going to be a bit different from previous years I think."

Heading into the match, Knowles will be taking a 'business as usual' approach, which involves the club winning more games of football, particularly this one.

Langhorne Creek took home the cup in last year's contest with a narrow nine-point victory.

While the Roosters will be looking to redeem themselves, the Hawks will be looking to keep the cup in their hands.

Langhorne Creek A Grade Men Coach Brock Gifford will also be coaching his first cup clash.

He was looking forward to the match-up, as were his players, and would be taking it easy in preparation for the big game.

"It's an honour to play on Anzac Day," he said.

"The rivalry between Langhorne Creek and Strathalbyn is alive and well, so I'm really looking forward to it.

"Because it's a Friday night, it's obviously different to a Saturday, so... we'll probably have a lighter night on the Thursday rather than a full training session."

Both clubs emphasised it was a privilege to be playing on Anzac Day.

For Knowles, it is a particularly important for his family.

"Just the chance to play on Anzac Day, whether it be at the MCG or Strathalbyn Oval, it's really important," he said.

"My father-in-law is a Vietnam vet, so we do a fair bit around Anzac Day so it's a pretty important day for us as a family.

"We get to live in this great country because of people's sacrifice, so it's really important, and I find it an absolute privilege to have this opportunity.

"It's a great honour to host a game on Anzac Day as a football club, and hopefully we can bring the cup back."

Gifford shared the same sentiment.

"Being Anzac Day, it's a privilege to play on that day," he said.

"I think it will, because it's a stand-alone game, attract more of a crowd.

"It's a really big event - something we're all looking forward to."

The A Grade rivalry will kick off at Strathalbyn Oval from 4.35pm.

Strathalbyn Football Club's Ethan Fox and Langhorne Creek Football Club's Jackson Dalitz will be among those battling it out for the cup next Friday. Photo: Giordina McKay

COMMEMORATING ANZAC

Eighty-year anniversary of the end of WWII

As the 80th anniversary of the end of World War II approaches in September, The Southern Argus dived into the archives for details on Strathalbyn's Victory in the Pacific (VP) Celebrations, which attracted a crowd of 2000.

Photo taken by Connie Stacey in 1945 of Strathalbyn's victory celebrations when the war finished.

The Southern Argus, September 6, 1945
The peace for which we have worked, fought and prayed during almost six long years is here! The victory is ours!
Our loved ones in the forces have reached the end of their long and dangerous road.
Our men, who have suffered so much in our cause, will soon be coming home, including the thousands who have languished in enemy prison camps.
All the morning preparations were proceeding apace.
Buildings were mostly carrying bunting of some kind and in this connection Woolfitt's Bakery displayed some red, white and blue streamers which were used when Ladysmith was relieved during the Boer War in 1900.
The same ribbons saw the light of day at the conclusion of that war.
They were again in use in 1918 at the close of World War I and on Friday they were again used.
The gardens presented a very gay scene, coloured electric light globes being interwoven in the branches of some of the trees.
Dancing on the lawns was indulged in by small groups.
The main attraction for the evening was the fireworks display.
The evening was perfect for rich entertainment, it being absolutely windless and pitch dark.

Several beautiful rockets were sent high into the air, exploding and disintegrating into different coloured stars as they festooned back towards earth.
Coloured Very Lights were also fired, about half an hour's entertainment being thus provided.
A large bonfire added to the scene and at a late stage in the evening the trailer pump was brought into use under the direction of Capt. Stubberfield.
The volunteer firemen turned on a great show here, at times sending three jets of water into the air where the light from the fire caught it reflecting many colours.

People are welcome to lay a wreath on behalf of family and/or an organisation.

Anzac Day rivalry taken to Strath netball courts...

BALL BATTLE

By Deirdre Graham

Friendly rivalry will be front and centre on the netball court when Langhorne Creek take on Strathalbyn for the upcoming traditional Anzac Day clashes.

The rivalry will be on in each grade on the day, including the Inter One clash that will see opponents Tilly Frost, of Langhorne Creek, and Kayla Schubert, of Strathalbyn, take to the court.

“With the dawn service before, and everyone there singing the National Anthem and everyone getting together for a minute’s silence, I think that is important,” Frost said.

“It is pretty serious on the court and then off the court it is all fun, and you are back to friends again.”

Frost and Schubert said the rivalry was “good” but “social”.

“It is always a very competitive day,” Schubert said.

“You know the people you are versing, but there is always a good rivalry.”

“We always want to beat the other team.”

Frost and Schubert’s teams have both been putting in some hard training sessions in the lead up to the 2025 season, with each believing their respective A Grade sides can take the Margery Gamlin medal.

Margery Phillipa Gamlin, known as Phillipa, was born in New Zealand in 1918, where she was a champion swimmer before arriving in Australia in 1939.

At the start of World War II, she joined the Women’s Agricultural Security Production Service (WASPS) – an invaluable team of women from country towns who devoted several days a week from their normal duties to assist on local farms while many men were away on active military service.

Mrs Gamlin enlisted in the Army in 1941 as a Voluntary Aid Detachment (VAD) – later known as the Australian Army Medical Women’s Service – and was stationed in New Guinea, 17 miles from Port Moresby on the Lalokai River and two miles south of the Kokoda Track.

It was where she served throughout the war, treating extensive casualties.

On her return, she went on to marry Max Gamlin, live in Sydney, raise five children, and later move to Henley Beach.

Mrs Gamlin was involved in an array of ex-service community activities such as the Women’s Auxiliary, Red Cross, RSL, and Legacy.

Later, she moved to McLaren Vale, remaining an avid sports lover and retaining an interest in ex-service organisations and its people.

COMMEMORATING ANZAC

The day I joined the Goolwa parade

By Mike Gilmour

Tommy Atkins, my uncle, died as a POW in Siam in 1945 aged 26. Goolwa was Tommy's home.

A murmur of voices, a chuckle as veterans and family mill and shuffle, sharing subtle rapport with their mates. Most are able, some with canes guiding gait. The order is given to muster, fall in. I join the Goolwa parade, with kith and kin

The parade is called to attention, for all to move in procession. All traffic diverted as needed, a small inconvenience conceded for the vets march down Cadell way. I am nervous joining the parade today

Diggers and ordinary folk in the parade. Some haunted by scenes often replayed, some missing limbs, minds in torment. Their reward, the medals making comment on moments of bravery most care not to share I feel the mateship bond, fused in warfare

Some wear medals over their heart for selfless service that sets them apart. Civvies with medals on the right, for family and friends, a tribute on sight. Some wear medals on both chests. I am humbled and happy to attest

The footpaths are lined with faces, from Goolwa and nearby places. They wave and clap the passing parade. Then silence, to reflect on sacrifices made, to honour the Anzacs, we can never repay. I am near out of breath and tears weigh

At the shrine, diggers and civvies stand easy as wreaths are laid for Aussies and Kiwis. Silent, resolute faces, remembering heroes, who kept us safe, free from foreign foes, to live and dream on this Southern Land. I feel Tommy Atkins's spirit join and stand

In sombre voice we recite The Ode, to salute the dead, who lie in quiet repose, to salute their sacrifice, as they deserve, to salute the ranks, who continue to serve. Heads bow, as minds are engrossed by the haunting call of the Last Post.

Argus donation to help RSL

Strathalbyn and Districts RSL Sub-Branch President Cate Goodall receives the cheque for $460 presented by The Southern Argus Editor Deirdre Graham last week.

Members of the Strathalbyn and Districts RSL Sub-Branch are preparing for a big Anzac Day, and will be helped along by a $460 cheque from The Southern Argus. The donation is a regular one the newspaper provides to the local sub-branch around this time of the year, and is seen as a way of thanking those who paid the ultimate sacrifice while keeping our nation free. President Cate Goodall thanked both The Southern Argus and the community who support the members. "It is a very inspiring thing, and it is nice to have a little windfall that gives us a chance to go and do other things," Mrs Goodall said. "Every military unit has a little badge – probably the size of a bread and butter plate – but we want to put them on a wall, so we actually thought, before we do that, we should paint the walls, so that is what we are doing first. "Hopefully, it will all be finished in time for people to come and have a look on Anzac Day." The Southern Argus Advertising Manager Darren Robinson extended the paper's thanks to the participating businesses who once again demonstrated their support for the feature. "With your generous support, we're proud to contribute a meaningful donation to our local RSL Sub-Branch," he said. "This gesture helps to acknowledge and support the ongoing work they do to honour the service and sacrifice of our veterans past and present. "As your local newspaper, The Argus is proud to stand with our community, offering our support wherever possible."

Johnson throws support behind stadium

By Deirdre Graham

One of Australia's biggest names in basketball has added his voice to the growing call for a basketball stadium in Strathalbyn. Daniel Johnson played more than 15 seasons in the National Basketball League, has his jersey retired with the Adelaide 36ers, and has represented Australia playing for the Boomers. He has been an all NBL first team three times over his career, and an all NBL second team three times, along with playing all over the world, attending college in the USA as a junior. Johnson was born and grew up in regional WA, understanding the importance of quality infrastructure in regional areas. With the Federal Election fast approaching on May 3, he was happy to share his comments in support of the Strathalbyn and District Basketball Association, and its stadium push. "Starting my life in a small regional town, I understand just how important community infrastructure is for local towns," Johnson said. "I also understand just how important it is for young people to have the opportunity to get into sport early in life and the positive impacts it has on their long-term health and wellbeing. "I've been to Strathalbyn many times and to think a small country community like it is not able to provide opportunities for young people to play basketball because of a lack of infrastructure is extremely sad. "I cannot advocate strongly enough for the need for a new basketball stadium in Strathalbyn – it's critically needed for the community." Johnson said having young children allowed him to relate to local parents keen for their children to play basketball. "I've got three young kids – the oldest of which is about to start getting into sport – and to think they'd be prevented from that because of a lack of infrastructure would be devastating," he said.

Roos have a solid win at Hawk Park

Last Saturday, the Langhorne Creek Hawks hosted the Victor Harbor Roos at Hawk Park, and the game was played under hot conditions with a light breeze favouring the southern end. The home side had come off a loss to Mount Compass in the previous week, whereas the Roos had points on the board from a win over Goolwa in the first round. The oval was in good condition considering the very dry conditions that have prevailed this season. The Hawks had first use of the breeze at the opening bounce, and it was the Hawk's Cates up against Treloar in the centre ruck duels. The home side had early centre clearances with plenty of entries into their forward arc. Eventually, they had their first major through A Towk after he received a free kick. The Roos had a limited play in their forward lines, but their forays were stopped by an efficient Hawk back six led by Derham. Another goal to the Hawks Dominish had the home side on top for the first term. The Roos had their opportunities later in the quarter, but they squandered their shots at goal. At the first break, the home side held an early lead of 11 points, however, the tables turned dramatically in the second quarter. Roos' Coach Cross must have given them a fair rev up as they came out with all guns blazing. The first major was through the hands of Stock for the Roos and, shortly afterwards, Gibbs did likewise, levelling the scores.

Victor were winning centre clearances, and they were sending the ball forward at every opportunity. Vincent and Heaslip for the Roos were picking up plenty of touches as the Hawks' defence struggled to man up at times, and the goals continued with Vincent, Ross and Heaslip, kicking accurately. The Hawks struggled to get the ball into their zone, and ended up with two majors for the term through Kellock and L Bates, but it was a struggle for the home side as the visitors piled on 10 goals for the quarter, giving them a comfortable lead of 35 points at the main break. The wind dropped out at the start of the third quarter and cloud cover made the afternoon a little more comfortable for spectators and players. The visiting Roos didn't take their foot off the accelerator, as they kept piling the pressure on the struggling Hawk defence. The Hawks struggled, matching up to their taller forward opponents. The term was similar to the previous 25 minutes, with the Roos getting the centre clearances time after time. Heaslip and Vincent were again prominent with their goal kicking, with the latter player very quick around the ground, and the Hawks struggled to lay a tackle on him. The Roos were quick to pounce on any Hawk errors and their footwork and handballs were continually hitting targets. The Hawks managed two goals for the term, but it was a meagre return as the visitors piled on another nine to pretty much seal the game by three quarter time. The home side had a much better final term and, although the visitors could put their queue in the rack by this time, it was pleasing to see the Hawks playing a better brand of footy in the last term. Howell and H Bruce gave the Hawks some score respectability, featuring in a six-goal term that ended up doubling their score for the match. Meanwhile, the visiting Roos snagged another seven majors in what was a high scoring term that had no outcome to the final result. The visitors stood out with their excellent goal shooting - rarely missing set shots at goal from all angles. Victor went home with a solid 81-point win in trying conditions. They had good players around the ground but Vincent stood out as a small forward, Heaslip was a focal target up forward and Elmes had many touches. For the Hawks, Mitch Cleggett was a strong target up forward and assisted in ruck, Henry Bruce and Kellock were valuable on ball and also contributed with goals during the game. The Hawks will need to redeem themselves against Strath next week for the Anzac Day clash whereas the Roos will be up against their home town rivals Encounter Bay in their round 3 match the following week as well.

Funding awarded to local football clubs

Almost 40 community football projects across the state, including 20 regionally, will share in about $3 million worth of funding through the second round of the South Australian Football Facilities Fund. The $8 million fund is a collaboration between the State Government, AFL and SANFL to continue growing the game, and build the legacy of the AFL Gather Round for the South Australian football community. "We are determined to use the success of Gather Round to benefit community sporting clubs and get more young people active," Minister for Recreation, Sport and Racing, Emily Bourke, said. "Upgraded infrastructure and modern facilities help build a platform for the next generation to chase their footy dreams on ovals in all parts of the state.

"This investment also creates a better environment for staff, volunteers and spectators who are the heartbeat of our communities." This year's grants will assist 37 projects, including ones for two local football clubs. Meadows Recreation Grounds Association will receive $75,000 for lighting upgrades, while Mount Barker Football Club will receive $25,000 for its scoreboard. About $3.1 million in grants will be available in the next round of the fund, with applications opening in August. Australian Rules football clubs, local councils, umpire associations and schools or tertiary institutions are eligible to apply. "We congratulate all the deserving recipients of the latest funding round of the SA Football Facilities Fund, which has now supported 79 important projects across South Australia,"

SANFL CEO, Darren Chandler, said. "The provision of high-quality facilities at all levels of our game is a priority for SANFL in maximising opportunities for people from all backgrounds and abilities to participate in our sport whether they're a player, spectator or umpire. "We strongly support the investment of funding into educational institutions, which enable us to unlock much-needed additional greenspace to facilitate the growth of our game, while also providing multi-purpose educational and sporting facilities for students to enjoy and thrive in. "Sport is a positive force in shaping the health and wellbeing of communities, particularly in regional SA, and through this important partnership with the AFL and State Government, we can ensure Gather Round leaves an enduring legacy."

Goolwa/Port Elliot vs Strathalbyn

Goolwa opened brightly after a promising pre season that was deflated by Victor Harbor in Round 1. Two goals to Jye Bottroff from strong marks got the Magpies going and solid work from Ryan Carnelly and Carter Norman saw the magpies open a handy lead before Strath could get started.

Strath closed the gap in the second quarter and the pressure was squarely in the Magpies nest at half time to see how they would respond. The second half became a hard fought affair with Strath closing the margin to a kick before the Magpies would pull away again to keep a narrow margin intact. Several missed opportunities by the Magpies kept the Roosters in it.

There was so many key moments in the game but perhaps none more so than a couple of notable efforts by Jett Reid, Fred Nissen and Kai lwao in a desperate last quarter that saw the Magpies chalk up their first win since July 1, 2023. The players left the field to a standing ovation from the Magpie crowd.

Duffield selected in state squad

Strathalbyn's Elliot Duffield has been selected for the South Australian squad ahead of the Marsh AFL U18 National Championships in June. The 34-player squad coached by SANFL U18 Academy Manager Tony Bamford will play four matches, and kicks off their interstate campaign against the Allies at Blacktown in Sydney, followed by Victoria Metro and Western Australia in SA, and Victoria Country in Melbourne. Training begins on Tuesday.

It was a surprisingly hot start to the day and Myponga knew it was going to be a tough game. Willunga scored some quick goals to start the game, despite high effort from Myponga's Ebony Hutchinson and Sienna Davidson.

Ellie Rumball and Aysha Hutchinson made the most of a smooth transition from defence to goals, to score a great team goal for Myponga in the first quarter. Willunga's Daisy Margrett and Indiana Millard were quick to pick up any loose balls and defended well, limiting Myponga's opportunities.

Their strong play all over the court saw Willunga score six goals each quarter, but Myponga persisted throughout the game, with Mackenzie Rumball making her netball debut in the second half and attacked strongly.

Thank you goes to parent volunteers and umpires.

The game started with the Myponga girls putting up some amazing full court defensive pressure to cause many turnovers.

Myponga's wing defence, Eloise O'Callaghan, was leading the charge through the midcourt.

Willunga were able to settle and take a two-goal lead at the first break.

Willunga came out firing in the second quarter, with some great circle defensive pressure on the Myponga goalies with Willunga's goal defence, Ruby Madgett, getting many intercepts and driving the ball well out of defence to give Willunga a 10-goal lead at the main break.

Even though the hot conditions were causing fatigue, the Myponga girls continued to work hard and for each other during the second half, however, Willunga were too strong and ran out winners by 17 goals.

A huge thank you goes to Macey Harris who filled in for us and also to the umpires, scorers and timers.

Round 2 was a hot one, but that didn't stop Myponga and Willunga putting everything they had into the game, and each quarter was tightly fought.

The shooters for each team made some brilliant goals, and the defenders pulled off some courageous intercepts, and all players tirelessly ran the ball all over the court.

With only a few minutes left in the last quarter, the scores were tied, but our field dug deep with their fitness and determination, giving them a late goal, and they won their game.

It was a great effort by both teams under tough conditions.

Big thanks go to Annika from 11s for filling in, in the tough conditions and, as always, thanks goes to the umpires and bench officials.

On a very hot day for winter netball, both teams worked hard in the heat.

The first quarter was very close, with both teams pressuring their opponents.

At the first break, the score was even at seven all.

Myponga made changes and went to half time, up by one goal.

In the third quarter, Myponga were able to apply pressure and capitalise on turnovers, and it went to the three-quarter break, up by six.

In the third quarter, Willunga's Mae Lock's accurate shooting helped them to close the gap, with Myponga's Jade Ellis applying pressure in the midcourt, while Myponga held on to win by two.

Thank you goes to umpires, scorers, timer and primary carers.

A nice warm start to the day saw the interchange box being used, with fresh legs across the court.

The team started well, we held our defensive line across the court, however, accuracy of goals eluded the team from its first win.

Willunga were too strong and dominated in goals, walking away with the win.

Wow - that was hot!
Well done goes to Willunga and Myponga in that heat, with both teams playing well.

Myponga had their defence tested against the height of Willunga.

However, Myponga did well and got some good intercept turnovers to get it back to their goalies.

Willunga certainly did well from their centre passes and through the midcourt.

Thank you goes to our two juniors, Isla and Ayla, for filling in and for your stamina playing two games in the heat - well done.

Thank you also goes to the umpires.

Congratulations go to Willunga - it was certainly a hard game to play.

Myponga 68 def Willunga 31

With uncertainty on what the end result would be, Willunga joined Myponga on an incredibly hot day to battle it out on the court.

Facing a completely different team to last year, there was a guest appearance from Gabriella Scarpantoni that surprised the Larks.

Keeping calm, Myponga came out with a very steady first quarter, playing well-composed netball that led for smooth transition from centre passes to their attacking circle.

Willunga applied pressure, but it was enough for the midcourt to carry the ball to shooters, Sarah Raper and Abby Stock, who moved around the circle brilliantly, creating easy opportunity for passes from the midcourt that enabled a quick flick and a goal.

Myponga carried the lead throughout the entire game.

The heat got to all, and rolling subs were utilised to ensure all the players were keeping hydrated, leading to many position changes.

After a great battle from Georgia Bates, getting intercepts from across the court, an unexpected injury led to Jade Deacon switching from midcourt to defence.

Jordan Hooper was a great voice in the defensive circle, and while Mikayla McDonald for Willunga shot incredibly under the ring, the defensive pressure from Ella Anderson and Kristen Rothwell led to many turnovers which resulted in additional goals for Myponga.

Ella Radbone put up a great fight in stopping that happen, and she got many intercepts which resulted in a Willunga goal.

Composed and calm play led to a very clean game, and with the aid of Jasmine Vallance and Rachel Rothwell in the rolling subs, the rotation of positions and players worked in favour for Myponga, who took home the win.

Myponga 60 def Willunga 46

It was a hot, sunny day in Myponga and Round 2 was well underway, when the Senior 3 teams took to Court 1.

Myponga came out strong from the first whistle, setting the tone early with sharp passing, solid defence, and a confident shooting circle, with Lauren Pratt and Sam Davies setting the tone early.

Their efforts were rewarded with an 18-10 lead at the first break, giving them early momentum.

Myponga stayed steady through the second quarter.

Willunga was there to make Myponga work though, winning the third quarter, 17-13, with their shooters having a near perfect quarter.

Their goalies found their rhythm, and feeders were placing the ball beautifully, narrowing the margin with some quick, clean plays through the midcourt.

Myponga wasn't done yet.

Regrouping for the final quarter, they stayed consistent and played smart in the hot weather, capitalised on a few turnovers and pushed out the margin once more.

With a convincing fourth quarter, Myponga sealed the match with a 14-goal win.

It was a great contest from both teams, with plenty of promise shown on court.

Good luck goes to Willunga for the season ahead.

Senior 4

Myponga 39 def Willunga 31

Willunga came out strongly on a stinking hot day in Myponga to lead the quarter break by three.

Myponga got their act together in the second quarter and played their usual clean and steady game to turn the game around and outscore Willunga, 12-3, in the quarter.

Willunga made some further changes at three quarter time which saw the game continue to be very defensive, with both goalies finding it hard to find their rhythm.

Willunga dictated the quarter, to see the scores level going into the last quarter.

Myponga managed to get some early turnovers in defence and capitalise on these and run out the game by eight goals.

Senior 5
Myponga 23 def by Willunga 47

On an unseasonably hot autumn day in Myponga, Willunga took the lead early with accurate passing and shooting leading by 10 at quarter time.

Fatigue was beginning to show in the second quarter as Willunga continued to dominate.

A change of positions at half time saw Myponga come out with fresh determination winning the third quarter.

However, it wasn't enough and Willunga came away with a strong win.

Senior 6

Myponga 44 def by Willunga 54

It was Round 2, and it was hot, hot and hot!

Willunga came out strong and at the end of the first quarter led by eight.

Myponga dug deep in the second quarter and won the quarter by seven goals.

The third quarter was 'even stevens'.

Willunga's youth saw them stretch their lead to end the game a clear 10 goals in front.

Well done goes to all playing in the heat, umpires, scorers, time keepers and carers.

Senior 7

Myponga 24 def by Willunga 38

Warm conditions saw both teams struggle with the heat and utilising bench players to ensure fresh legs.

Game remained close in the first half with Willunga leading by two goals.

Willunga midcourt of Shannon Roper, Hannah Gregory and Haidee Bound showed great skill and endurance throughout the game.

In the second half Myponga key shooter Helen Stock had a short rest which meant a fresh goalie combination of Sienna Jones and Lucy Mickan, but unfortunately the defence was too tough and held them out.

Kristy Smith played extremely well and worked amazingly with Alicia Galbraith with great intercepts and movement out of the defensive end.

Under 9 Gold

It was a great game by the girls in their first match for the season.

They moved the ball well and everyone contributed to a fantastic win - bring on Anzac Day!

Inter 4

The Inter 4s fought hard in tough conditions on Saturday, but unfortunately went down to Victor.

Despite the result, they played with heart, worked as a team and everyone stepped up when it mattered most.

We also welcomed two new teammates for their first ever game of netball.

They both fitted in with the team and played really well, and are sure to be a great fit for the season ahead.

Senior 2

In hot sunny conditions, Victor started the game strong and set up a commanding lead.

With new players and combinations taking the court, for Creek this year, it was pleasing to see that they continued to fight hard for the next three quarters.

Victor's pace down court and accurate scoring set them up for a convincing win.

Senior 5

Under sweltering conditions, Langhorne Creek versed Victor Harbor for the first home game of the season.

Creek were missing several key players, but rallied together with help of our young Inters, Molly Frost and Ella Bray.

These girls did such an amazing job playing against seniors in 35-degree heat, and after a gruelling game, Langhorne Creek came out on top, winning, 36 to 27.

The sun was out in full force for the team's first game of the season. It was very warm but the girls pushed through and showed some beautiful skills from weeks of pre training. Well done girls.

11&U (1)

Strathalbyn 5 v Goolwa 28

Our first game for the season was a tough one with the scorching sun illuminating the court and challenging the girls.

However, through the challenges the girls held their heads high, played awesome dtefense getting lots of touches and goals although being quite short, played very well.

Although Goolwa was stronger and had the height advantage the Strath girls put up a good fight.

We'll get them next time! Thank you heaps to Aylah and Kenzie for helping us this week was much appreciated.

11&U (2)

Strathalbyn 7 v Goolwa 3

A good start defensively by both teams saw Strathalbyn in front by only 4 at half time.

Open passages of play by both teams in the second quarter were impressive. Congratulations to both teams. Well done.

11&U (3)

Strathalbyn 13 v Goolwa 3

A strongly contested first quarter saw both teams level at the first break.

Strathalbyns open court play and strong defensive unit saw an eight-goal lead by three quarter time.

Goolwa rallied during the last half showing some good passages of play. Strathalbyn were too strong on the day coming away with the win.

Congratulations to everyone.

13&U (1)

Strathalbyn 27 v Goolwa 29

We travelled down the road to Goolwa in warm conditions.

The girls started well and we had a small lead at the first break.

Goolwa started upping their game and their goalies were very good but our girls tried hard playing really good defence and we were up by 1 at the main break.

We changed things up and it was a close second half but unfortunately we had the opportunities but couldn't make it count and we went down by 2.

Thank you to Harper and Anna for filling in for us this week.

13&U (2)

Strathalbyn 21 v Goolwa 23

In very hot conditions both teams came out strong.

With accuracy in goals coming from both sides it remained neck and neck til half time.

After half time Goolwa's attack proved too strong and they came from behind to take the win.

13&U (3)

Strathalbyn 16 v Goolwa 12

Strath had a slow start to the game and were 5 down in the first quarter.

Each quarter the girls started to work really well together and fought hard to take the win.

It was a friendly hard fought match from both sides.

Inter 1

Strathalbyn 58 v Goolwa 31

Strath were prepared for a tough match against Goolwa this week.

Unfortunately for Goolwa they were missing a few key players but they fought hard the entire game.

Strath played a very consistent game managing 15 goals in the first two quarters.

Strath put on another 18 in the third and pulled away to a good win.

Well done to all players for fighting out in tough conditions.

Inter 2

Strathalbyn 50 v Goolwa 21

The girls had a great win this week, implementing new strategies to see them overcome Goolwa 50-21.

Starting strong despite the heat, they stayed steady throughout the whole game to remain in control.

Inter 4

Strathalbyn 47 v Goolwa 30

Strath started the game strong in the first half leading the way.

In the third quarter Goolwa had a great comeback, but Strath finished the game with their best quarter for their first win of the season

League

Strathalbyn 47 v Goolwa 32

A dominant display for Strathalbyn League in hot conditions. Patient and precise play in attack paid off, with Indi Pedler and Tash Abbott controlling the tempo.

Plenty of rolling subs to combat the heat from both teams, but it was Strathalbyn that adjusted to new combinations quicker and ran out 17 goal winners.

Senior 2

Strathalbyn 47 v Goolwa 51

Strath got a few players back this week which helped in the heat.

Alyssa Mumford and Em O'Driscoll were welcome inclusions as both provided experience and netball smarts.

Goolwa got the jump on the Strath girls pulling away to a six-goal lead at half time.

Strath changed their line up and it paid dividends.

Ness and Sienna looked comfortable in attack and the red and white threatened until the very end, unfortunately going down by just 4.

Keep working ladies, the combinations will come together. Bring on Anzac Day.

Senior 4

Strathalbyn 31 v Goolwa 42

Goolwa got a strong start on Strath making an early lead but Strath worked hard to get it back only 1 point down at quarter and half time breaks.

Both teams utilising the rolling subs to combat the heat exhaustion.

The team was supported by Issey and Alisha from inters.

We made great passages down the court working seamlessly together and converting.

While Goolwa had a strong third quarter gaining a comfortable lead, Strath rallied to attempt a final push in the last quarter but couldn't make any gains.

The team put in an amazing effort today, we played well as a team and supported each other through tough conditions.

Senior 5

Strathalbyn 21 v Goolwa 34

This week's game resembled the trends seen on the stock market over the last couple of weeks.

Early signs pointed to a bull market, with clean passes and sharp shooting driving optimism with us surging ahead of Goolwa in the first quarter with investor confidence.

By half-time, however, cracks began to show.

Strathalbyn held a narrow lead, but warning signs emerged, most notably when Kym's calf suffered a sudden downturn late in the second quarter, triggering the dreaded tariff moment.

he stock market crashed. Panic swept through the team as Goolwa capitalised on the chaos.

Goolwa took full advantage, staging a hostile takeover.

They ran away with the win, defeating Strathalbyn 34–21 in a result that left local investors shaking their heads.

Strathalbyn's board would like to extend warm thanks to the two Inters who filled in — true heroes in volatile conditions.

Senior 6

Strathalbyn 30 v Goolwa 46

Goolwa came out fighting, highlighting their strengths in pressure and sharp shooting.

After a few unexpected changes for Strath, we were able to stay in the game and challenge their strengths with our own impressive game.

Battling the peak of the intense heat and humidity, Strath fought hard but overall were unable to match the pressure set out by Goolwa.

Even with the support of three junior players, making their senior debuts, Strath unfortunately couldn't recover from the impressive start from the opposition.

Senior 7

Strathalbyn 13 v Goolwa 21

The girls came out strong and gave it their all for the first two quarters, putting in a great effort despite the tough conditions.

With only 7 players and the heat bearing down, the team pushed through with determination and heart.

Unfortunately, the extreme weather started to take a toll, causing a few players to feel unwell.

In the best interest of everyone's health, Strathalbyn made the decision to forfeit the game.

A massive thank you to multiple inters for stepping up and helping us out – we really appreciated the support!

Johnson throws support behind basketball stadium

By Deirdre Graham

One of Australia's biggest names in basketball has added his voice to the growing call for a basketball stadium in Strathalbyn.

Daniel Johnson played more than 15 seasons in the National Basketball League, has his jersey retired with the Adelaide 36ers, and has represented Australia playing for the Boomers.

He has been an all NBL first team three times over his career, and an all NBL second team three times, along with playing all over the world, attending college in the USA as a junior.

Johnson was born and grew up in regional WA, understanding the importance of quality infrastructure in regional areas.

With the Federal Election fast approaching on May 3, he was happy to share his comments in support of the Strathalbyn and District Basketball Association's stadium push.

"Starting my life in a small regional town, I understand just how important community infrastructure is for local towns," Johnson said.

"I also understand just how important it is for young people to have the opportunity to get into sport early in life and the positive impacts it has on their long-term health and wellbeing.

"I've been to Strathalbyn many times and to think a small country community like it is not able to provide opportunities for young people to play basketball because of a lack of infrastructure is extremely sad.

"I cannot advocate strongly enough for the need for a new basketball stadium in Strathalbyn – it's critically needed for the community."

Johnson said having young children allowed him to relate to local parents keen for their children to play basketball.

"I've got three young kids – the oldest of which is about to start getting into sport – and to think they'd be prevented from that because of a lack of infrastructure would be devastating," he said.

"To think 20 kids under 10 missed out on playing because of that lack of infrastructure is an absolute indictment.

"Governments must provide the infrastructure small communities need to thrive and be prosperous.

"My message is, investment in community infrastructure provides a long-term benefit that is immeasurable.

"Sport is the glue that brings country towns together."

Johnson counted himself lucky to grow up with good infrastructure for his chosen sport.

"I was lucky growing up that I had access to quality sporting infrastructure and opportunities, and I want to make sure the next generation has those same opportunities," he said.

"I urge everyone to back this critical initiative and to provide the young people of the Strathalbyn community the opportunities they deserve."

Friday races thrills crowds at Strathalbyn

Under perfect autumn skies, a strong crowd of more than 400 race-goers enjoyed a thrilling day of racing and entertainment for Owners, Trainers and Breeders Race Day at Strathalbyn last Friday.

In the first race – Sportsbet Set a Deposit Limit Colts, Geldings and Entries Maiden Plate (1200m) – Strathalbyn favourite ‘Political Promise’ thrilled the home crowd with a gritty half-length win.

The three-year-old bay gelding – trained locally by Peter Moody and ridden with precision by Lachlan Neindorf – kicked off the day in style.

A stand-out moment of the day came in the second race – The Nostradamus Standing at Springfield Farm Fillies and Mares Maiden Plate (1200m) – where the owners of the winning three-year-old bay filly – trained by Peter and Belinda Blanch and expertly ridden by Kayla Crowther – gave her delighted group of 10 owners not only the $12,500 winner’s purse but also the valuable stallion service from Nostradamus, courtesy of Springfield Farm.

Then in race seven – SA Thoroughbred Breeders Inc Rating 0-56 Handicap – the day ended on a high, with a thrilling finish, as ‘Head of the Herd’ – trained by Sarah Rutten at Murray Bridge – surged to a narrow 0.57-length win under top SA jockey Connor Murtagh.

Gilded Age, again ridden by Kayla Crowther, was a gallant runner-up.

The win wrapped up the Quaddie in spectacular fashion, rewarding punters with a hefty pay-out of $21,527.30.

The next race on the Strathalbyn Racing Club calendar is the Daish Irrigation & Fodder Family Race Day on Sunday, May 18.

Strathalbyn Ladies Golf

Wet and wild

Something unusual happened on Wednesday morning at the ladies' golf - it tried to rain!

Most girls had their umbrellas up to keep dry, and it was a bit of a change as the umbrellas have been used to keep off the sun.

Perhaps this means a change in the season - we hope so.

Last week I saw Marie Kingsbury and Pauline Walkom all over the course in their buggies, circling around trees, in and out of hazards, in and out of the creek, and they looked like a couple of bull ants before a storm, however, this week it was a great form reversal.

Straight off the tees, straight down middle of the fairways and once on the green, straight into the hole. Consequently, Pauline won the day and Marie was runner-up.

Two girls had a round of nine holes, and 14 girls played 18 holes.

On Wednesday, Sue Phillips swapped her bowls for golf sticks and had a steady nine holes, keeping Maureen Need company in her cart.

Some of the comments I heard from the girls about their golf were, great, happy, quite good, average, poor and worst game of golf ever - pick which one was applicable to your game, girls.

Mel Johnson had a nice second shot on the 17th to win nearest the pin.

It had been a busy time for the golfing girls this week, with pennant catering at Strathalbyn on Monday.

Wednesday was the usual competitions, and then on Thursday Mel Johnson and Jo Cullen travelled to Thaxted Park, where the theme for the day was Dress like a Pro, so these girls went as professional dressage riders.

It was a bit difficult to play golf in all that clobber, so jackets, boots and hats came off during the game.

On Friday, six of our girls played in the Aston Hills Gala Day, with Anne Semple winning a nearest the pin - good work, Anne.

We are starting to make plans for our own gala day, which is on May 23, and is a great, fun day with our theme being Hollywood Dress (like the stars), so we should see some great outfits.

Both of our pennant teams will be playing this Monday at Echunga, so good luck goes to all the players.

This will be the last match for the Division 2s, but the Division 3s have a couple more matches yet.

Sean Walsh a clear winner

By Perry Jones

While the summer heat lingered on, Sean Walsh handled the conditions well in last Saturday's stableford competition, to win the day with 42 points in a field of 54 players.

Sean was certainly looking good after 23 points on the front nine, and then backed that effort up with 19 points on the back nine.

Sean picked up four points with a birdie on the fifth, and then three points for a birdie on the ninth, and then on the par three 17th, it was a birdie two for three more points.

Fellow A-Grader and captain Graeme Bertholini finished second on the day on a countback from Sally Roberts, with Graeme having 40 points with one scrub.

Berti had 16 points on the front nine with a birdie on the 10th, was nearest the pin on the sixth, and 24 on the back nine with a birdie on the 16th (unlucky it was not an eagle), as his second shot on the par five landed on the green and then lipped the cup.

There were a couple of bigger scores than the leaders on the day, in Spencer and Williams with 58 points each, but they could not claim any prizes (as they yet need to put in enough cards to get a proper handicap), which captain Bertholini said would be a lot lower than the provisional handicap of 45 that they had been allotted.

There were a couple of eagles on the day (both on the par five third), one being Sean Naylor with 34 points for the round, quite used to getting one on this hole, and the other, Paul Coombe, staying out of trouble a bit more for a change, as he finished with 34 points for the round, getting the other.

Paul also collected nearest second (19+) on the ninth hole.

The nearest the pin on the 17th went to Kim Wittwer, describing his tee shot as going along the ground, bouncing left and right all over the place, to finish closest to the pin for the day, with partner Troy Williams verifying Kim's description, while Kim finished with 29 points and Troy with 36.

Gordon Robson was out to see if he could, at least, win a ball with a high points count and he did pick up seven balls (that was when looking for his ball in the creek after hitting off the tee on the 15th), on his way to 33 points for the round.

Alan Haberfield was in the prime position to pick up an eagle on the par five 12th until he had three putts for a par and two points, and he also had the nearest the pin shot on the eighth.

While Ben McLeod picked up a nearest the pin on the 15th, playing mate Henry Kelly, with an ordinary 29 points for the round, did pick up nearest second shot (0-18) on the 10th when his tee shot finished five feet from the pin.

Ken Lester was up to his old tricks and had an 'airy' on the 12th to scrub the hole, and he managed to collect a birdie on the eighth fairway – the magpie, luckily escaping injury.

Last week's winner, Des Kelly, no doubt was trying to get his handicap to go out again, saying he didn't think he would go all that well on the day (this being confirmed on the first hole when his tee shot dropped out of a tree on the right of the fairway) on his way to 31 points.

President Randall Pitt, playing with Des, was blaming his continuing shoulder problems for his poor effort of 29 points, and must have thought his ball needed cooling off as it went into the dam on the seventh and again on the 16th.

Veteran and former multiple A-Grade champion, Lyndon Gill, was back for a visit and was playing with Des and Randall to finish with 33 points.

He was quite chuffed with his effort on the third hole, getting his third shot to be just off the back of the green on the par five, and to then putt the ball downhill onto the green and in for a birdie, saying he couldn't remember how long it was since he had had a birdie.

While the B Grade was taken out by David Wright with 38 points, it was multiple B Grade champion, Kym Nelson, that had a few problems on the day.

On his third shot to the green on the seventh, he finished behind the big tree on the corner near the dam, saying that with the next shot he probably would hit one of those little twigs at the top of the tree with his lofted shot, and his prediction came true lucky not to finish in the dam on his way to six for the hole and one point and 33 points for the round.

On the 12th, Kym, after two long shots found his ball against the fence and was seen having several left-hand practice shots in preparing to hit the ball, but unfortunately his real shot turned out to be an 'airy' before he then chipped out onto the green and sunk a putt for a seven and a point.

Kym, then after walking the front nine, felt a bit tired so accepted a ride with one of his partners, Lloyd Jackson, which turned out not to be a good move by Lloyd, as his game went backwards.

Lloyd thought he was in trouble on the par three sixth when his ball appeared to go into the creek with his tee shot, but was then found 20 metres short of the green.

Lloyd then followed the example of another member of the group, Kingsley Handke, in going into the dam while the fourth member of the group, Michael Clarke, was still trying to recover from a poor start, seen picking up on several occasions.

Michael did escape on the second hole when his tee shot went into the trees on the right, needing to chip out onto the fairway to then see his next shot land the ball on the green to have five for two points.

On the third, Michael's second shot hit a tree for the ball to land five metres behind him, then seeing his third shot finish in the drain, and his fourth went over the back of the green, picking up and saying he had had enough of that hole.

There were a few people suffering in the hot conditions on the day, with Kingsley Handke one of them, as after teeing off on the 14th with a good shot, was keen to jump into his cart to get to the ball for his next shot.

On arriving at his ball, he noticed a bottle of raspberry drink in the console of the cart (which he doesn't drink), then realised he had taken off in the wrong cart, it being Michael Clarke's of similar model and colour.

His partners certainly did a bit of stirring, and no doubt thought that he should have cooled off by swimming in the dam to get his ball back on the 16th, as he finished last in C Grade with 27 points, 10 behind the winner in this grade of Andrew Muller.

John Owen had a reasonable 32 points but he only gained one par for the day, that after teeing off on the par three 17th and going over the trees on the left, then with the next shot going over the back of the green, before his chip shot saved the day by going into the hole.

One of John's partners, in Kerry Vine, had 34 points for the day, overcoming difficulties on the 16th with his tee shot finishing under the gobbie bush on the corner of the fairway.

His brave shot from there, in an attempt to get near the green, hit the bush to travel about five metres before he pulled out a six iron to land on the green, and then had a successful birdie putt.

On the last hole, for some reason, Kerry wasn't thinking too straight, and after his tee shot was told he had hit off the ninth tee (not the 18th) which was further back.

This cost Kerry a stroke penalty, but he still had five on the par four hole to pick up two points.

Playing with John and Kerry were Allen Anderson and Mick Morros, with Allen on the 16th asking Kerry to remove the flag in putting for par, missing the putt by a long way and blaming Kerry for holding the flag too far away from the hole.

Mick made a meal of the 16th after his tee shot flew high to hit a tree, to land just short of the ladies' tee just a few yards away, leading him later to put the ball in his pocket for a scrub on his way to 29 points.

Damon Mayes certainly had another of those days, saying after trying to play the sixth which had been oversown with bent grass to keep it green during the winter, that his game fell apart and was in line to finish last with 18 points.

Brian Simpson, at the age of 85, was unexpected to turn up and try to play in the hot conditions, but he lined up to pull his buggy around the course, and to not get a ride in a cart to suffer in the end to come last on a countback from Damon.

Brian, after many years, had an 'airy' in teeing off on the 14th, leaving a big hole as his club bounced over the ball which was left sitting on the tee.

With the next hole, Brian had a good tee shot but couldn't find the ball.

In the putting jackpot Graeme Bertholini failed to win the money, as did Mick Morros and Ken Lester.
